GRENADA CITIZENS JOIN IN PROGRAM DESIGNATED TO STIMULATE BUSINESS AND CREATE MORE JOBS

BUY NOW FOR BETTER BUSINESS IS THEME

"Buy Now for Better Business" today became the driving force behind a united effort on the part of all Grenada to "restore public confidence, stimulate buying and create jobs."

Business leaders, housewives, citizens generally were today mobilized in this mass move to restore Grenada and surrounding trade territory to its rightful place in the economic life of a great state and a great nation.

All over this section of Mississippi, in every city, town and hamlet similar campaigns are being launched—all with the same objective so strikingly told in the crusade slogan, "Buy Now for Better Business."

As pointed out by sponsors the "Buy Now" campaign is no attempt at ballyhoo but a sane, common sense plan to spur buying all along the line.

Bank deposits, the state treasury balance—every barometer of business indicates that there is money in the hands of thousands of prospective buyers. The difficulty is that these prospective buyers are victims of fear — fear of they know not what.

If they buy now, better business will result for everyone, including themselves. Most important of all, as viewed by movement sponsors, since "sales mean jobs" hundreds of jobless will be restored to employment and hundreds of homes thus made happy again.

One hundred per cent cooperation of employers, employees and citizens generally are reported by Chairman Proby and members of his "quick-action" committee in charge of preliminary plans for the campaign.

Hundreds of citizens are wearing "Buy Now" buttons which are available free of charge at local "Buy Now" headquarters.

Stores and places of business generally are prominently displaying in show windows and on interior walls the attractive "Buy Now—We Are Cooperating" posters.

Scores of citizens, enthused over the potentialities of the buying crusade, have personally called upon Chairman Proby and members of his committee to pledge personal cooperation.

The preliminary mass meeting at which crusade details were announced was declared to have been one of the most enthusiastic of all those held throughout Mississippi.

All of which, move sponsors believe, point to the success of the four-weeks selling drive.

Each week of the crusade—September 5, September 12, September 19, and September 26—local business interests, sales forces

W. A. Prather Retires After 32 Years With I. C.

Going to Take It Easy and Enjoy Life With Family and Friends

After thirty-two years faithful service with the Illinois Central Railroad, W. A. Prather voluntarily retired as of August 31.

Mr. Prather became associated with the I. C. in 1907 and was assigned to the timber preserving department at Tie Plant. He was soon tendered the position of division storekeeper and held that position the greater part of the time of his service.

Mr. Prather was both a good employee and employer. He has been responsible for many good positions that Grenada boys and former Grenada boys now hold, having given them their start with the I. C. He is loved and respected by all with whom he has had business associations and will be sorely missed by the present personnel at Tie Plant.

Mr. Prather said, "I'm sixty-eight years old and am just now going to begin enjoying life with my family and friends."

The Sentinel wishes Mr. Prather many more years of life that he may seek and gain all that life has for him.

Average Life Expectancy Has Increased Eight Years In The Past Twenty-Five

The average life expectancy has increased eight years in the past twenty-five, states Dr. Felix J. Underwood, State Health Officer, after a recent study of life trends.

This increase in the span of life from fifty-three to sixty-one years in only a quarter of a century indicates remarkable medical progress according to Dr. Underwood, especially in view of the fact that the American people have undergone three major catastrophes during this period—the World War, the influenza epidemic of 1918 and the depression.

Given as the reason for the great increase in longevity by the State Health Officer is the closer relation of medical, social and economic agencies.

"There has been a unifying of welfare effort," Dr. Underwood states, "and a sincere desire of all concerned to treat the whole man—body, mind, and spirit—rather than administer to one small need without looking into its cause and results.

"Physicians work hand in hand with health departments. Health departments join forces with departments of education, with churches, clubs, schools, and voluntary organizations. Welfare agencies, nutrition experts, government divisions to raise the standard of living—all have a similarity of mission—to improve the lot of man.

"And so in an era of cooperation, of systematic and continued welfare effort, we have showed what can be done. In a quarter of a century of adversity, we have increased the span of life eight years.

"This record of achievement definitely points out our duty. In spite of what has been done, human illness, misery, and death still are rife in our state and nation."

Pointing out the many public health problems crying for further attention, Dr. Underwood names pneumonia, syphilis, and tuberculosis as leading causes of death le, and curable. He cites the need for sanitary disposal of body wastes among three-fourths of Mississippi people. He points out the distressingly large number of deaths among mothers and infants and the needlessly high death rate from heart disease, cancer, and Bright's disease.

"The health problem is in plain view before us," Dr. Underwood says. "And now the humanitarian union of medical, social, and economic forces is more solidified. It is my opinion that forces at work for human welfare are blending—swelling the grand crescendo in the march of medicine."

"Peace Through Preparedness"

Former Grenadian Inquires Of Friends

Laramie, Wyo., Aug. 26, 1938

Mr. Mayor of Grenada,

Dear Sir:

I am writing to you to find out if Mr. Dave Blount or Jim or Arthur Dubard or Henry Pew are around Grenada yet. This is a very unusual request for it was so long ago. I left there in 1887 and moved to Winona and then moved to Colorado Springs in 1889 and I have never been back there since, but I may come down there this winter and I thought I would write and see if anyone of the boys are living yet. Henry Pew or Kerby or Willie Drummonds if any of them are there yet. I wish you would tell them to drop me a line at 815 South Eighth, Laramie, Wyoming and I will put a self addressed envelope and stamp for you to answer. If you will it sure would do me a lot of good to hear from some one there. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am

Sincerely yours,
Omar Johnson,

Dr. Semmes was born January 27, 1867 near Sardis, Panola County, the son of Mr. J. M. and Mary Morgan Semmes. He came to Grenada July 22, 1894 and immediately entered the drug business, buying the old Parker Drug Store.

Dr. Semmes was a successful business man. The worldly goods he leaves behind bear witness that he was shrewd, honest and fair in his dealings with his fellowman. He started with a small business in Grenada and managed it well. He was on the job day and night until a few years ago when ill health compelled him to leave business matters to his two most capable sons, Raphael and Zac. Dr. Semmes did not fall for the "get-rich-quick" schemes. He adhered to the theory of hard work, application of common sense in investments and fair dealings, to bring success.

Dr. Semmes led a quiet, simple life. He was not lavish in his spending but provided the best for his wife and family. He was charitable, he was good, he minded his own business and he was a gentleman. The character of his children bears witness to their splendid home training.

Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. C. A. Pharr, were held from the home of his son, Raphael, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

Pallbearers were J. B. Horn, J. B. Perry, Jr., W. W. Whitaker, J. P. Pressgrove, W. K. Huffington, and Jay Gore.

Honorary pallbearers were L. J. Doak, Edgar Underwood, W. D. Salmon, R. C. Trusty, G. R. Grant, Cowles Horton, J. D. Crenshaw and H. J. Ray.

CAPITOL ACTIVITIES — — —

The Secretary of State's Department has received a number of requests for an explanation of just what the Homestead Exemption Laws provides as finally passed by the Legislature, and what exemptions the towns and cities will receive under this new law. The high points of the law are as follows:

A tract of land of 160 acres and residence is exempt up to $5,000 from state, county, school and road district taxes, but is not exempt from bond and interest tax. The land does not have to be in a body, but within 5 miles of the home site.

House and lots in towns and cities are exempt up to $5,000, of school tax in separate school districts. A separate school district is supported by the town or city and no county tax is levied for schools operated in a separate school district. There is no other exemptions for homes, but they are exempt from state and county tax.

The land exempted for farm homestead is limited to not exceeding 160 acres, and must be used for agricultural purposes only. However, provision is made for the person who lives outside of a municipality, on a homestead, but does not use the land for agricultural purposes, by allowing a residence and five acres to be classified as a homestead, not to exceed $5,000.

The Legislature placed the following taxes to make up a fund to reimburse the counties, towns and cities for the revenue that they will not receive as a result of the Homestead Exemption Law:

On cigarettes — additional tax —one-fifth of one cent on each cigarette sold. On cigars, cheroots, stoggies and smoking tobacco— new tax—one cent for each five cents of the retail selling price.

The Governor has the authority to increase the state ad valorem tax, if necessary, two mills.

Finally, the Legislature appropriated $5,250,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose of making reimbursements or payments to the several counties, municipalities, special road districts and special school districts, including separate school districts, for ad valorem maintenance taxes lost by reason of the exemption of homes.

In further explanation of the Homestead Exemption as applied to municipalities, where the word municipality is used it means and shall be limited to any incorporated city, town or village, maintaining a municipal government, with duly authorized and acting officials, and exercising governmental functions as authorized by Chapter 50, Mississippi Code of 1930 and amendments thereto, whether existing by virtue of a private chapter, code charter or commission form of government as defined by Section 2624, Mississippi Code of 1930.

With the meaning of what constitutes a municipality explained, the law provides that the home of every head of a family in any territory which is part of a municipal separate school district, shall be exempt to the extent of $5,000 of the assessed valuation thereof, from school maintenance ad valorem taxes levied by the municipal separate school district; but the person who is the head of a family must apply for the exemption and comply with the provisions of the law, in all respects. The heads of families in the county will also have to make application for the exemption.

And here is how application is to be made. Every person who is the head of a family and the owner and occupant of a home and who desires the home exemption shall personally, or by his duly constituted attorney in fact, make a written application on the prescribed blank, to the assessor, or the governing authority of such municipality. The blanks shall be prescribed and furnished to the assessors by the State Tax Commission, and shall require substantially the same information as is required in the Home Exemption Act of 1938, namely: description of the property on which exemption is claimed which shall be sufficiently accurate so as to clearly identify the land, give the dates of construction of the improvements, if the date is known, otherwise the approximate date of construction, and such other pertinent information as may be required. There shall also be stated the names of the owners of the land; and if required, when, how, and from whom acquired; kind of title held, the consideration paid, the amount of the mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance outstanding, the assessed value, the number of the tax receipt for the last year for which taxes were paid, and the name of the person who paid them. There shall be in the place provided a plat or drawing of the tract, or tracts, of land involved and claimed as a home.

The "assessor" in regard to municipalities means the officer who actually performs the duty of listing the property in the municipality for assessment and taxation, and who makes the assessment rolls of the municipality, and the assessment rolls of a municipal separate school district, including property outside of the municipality, in added territory.

The only tax in a municipality the home owner is allowed exemption on up to $5,000 of the assessed valuation of the property is the separate school district tax. Of course, the municipal home owner gets the same exemption on state and county taxes up to $5,000 valuation that the man who lives on the farm receives.

All lands and other taxable property subject to assessment in a municipality, held by any person within a municipality, on the first day of January, shall be assessed, and ad valorem taxes thereon levied and collected for the ensuing year.

The certificates of the municipalities must be filed with the state tax commission within ten days after the Board of Mayor and Aldermen have revised same, and the land rolls of the counties must be filed with the tax commission within ten days after they have been revised by the Board of Supervisors of the county.

The Tax Assessor is required to furnish blanks for home owners to make out applications for home exemption.

All home exemption applications must be preserved by the Chancery Clerk and by the City Clerk for three years.

The time of making reimbursements to municipalities for revenue lost by reason of the homestead exemption is the same as applies to reimbursing counties for the loss and shall be made in two installments, one on or about the first day of March of each year, and the second installment on September first of each year. Only one payment is to be made for the year 1938, but two for each of the succeeding years. In order to get this reimbursement a certificate must be furnished to the State Tax Commission by the City Clerks of each municipality giving the following information: (1) The total assessed value in the municipality or added territory, of real estate, personal property, and railroads, gas companies, and other public service corporations. (2) The total assessed value and the number of homes which have been lawfully exempted. (3) The tax levies which have been made in the municipalities, separately for the purposes for which each levy is imposed. (4) The total tax for maintenance which should apply to the homes which have been exempted and for which application for payment, or reimbursement is made. (5) The total amount of maintenance taxes levied and to be collected on the assessment remaining after the deduction of values of all homes lawfully exempted. (6) The total amount of taxes levied for debts of any kind and the interest thereon, and such other and additional information as the commission may require.

Under the law as applies to homestead exemption as forms, blanks, certificates, receipts, etc., are to be furnished to the municipalities by the State Tax Commission, which commission is officially charged with the duty of administering the law, both as applied to counties and to municipalities.

In this and previous articles we have tried to give our readers the sum and substance of the three bills passed by the recent extraordinary session of the Mississippi Legislature dealing with the exemption of homes from ad valorem taxation in state, counties, and municipalities, numbered respectively House Bill Number 2, 3 and 4. Of course, there are some points that we have been unable to touch upon, being minor in importance, but I have endeavored to give the high-lights of all these bills, and hope that those who have read the articles have gained some information that have made the operation of the Homestead Exemption Laws clearer to secure home exemption.

ATTEND WOMAN'S STATE CAMP AT GULFSIDE

(By Vera Lee Sledge)

Vera Lee Sledge, colored Home Demonstrator of Grenada county, and thirty of her housewives attended the Home Demonstration Women's State Camp at Gulfside —Waveland, Miss., August 15-20.

This was one of the most enjoyable camp meetings the women has ever attended.

Those who attended this meeting had a chance to bathe their bodies in the Gulf of Mexico. The good old salty water was refreshing to them as they took their sea baths. Instead of drying themselves with towels the precious sun was used as a means of drying the body. This was done in order that the water be baked through the skin. Without doubt every one felt that some benefit had been gained as to their health conditions.

This meeting was so inspiring and helpful to the housewives that they feel they should begin now planning for the next one.

In order to obtain financial means to attend this camp meeting, the housewives began working to that effect, by giving entertainments, selling chickens, eggs, and vegetables, until the amount needed was raised. A special bus was obtained in order that they all make the trip together.

Some of the girls that joined the housewives on this trip were two club leaders in the persons of Misses Baker and Brown, an elder club girl, Essi Be. Williams. A visiting friend, Miss Hattie Donley.

Dutch Luncheon To Be Held On Mon. Sept. 5

Business Men and Women Employees Urged to Attend.

L. C. Proby, Chairman "Buy For Better Business" campaign recently launched in Grenada, today announced that a "dutch" luncheon would be held at Grenada Hotel, Monday, September 5, at noon, and urge that all business men and women, together with their employees, attend.

The "Buy Now For Better Business" campaign is well under way in other sections of the state and merchants are very enthusiastic, "said Chairman Proby," and I sincerely hope that Grenadians will manifest an interest in this crusade." Mr. Proby went on to say that business was on the upturn, that money will be coming in from the sale of cotton and cotton seed and from the harvesting of cotton, that bank deposits are up and business in Grenada has a chance to "go places and do things" if the business men of Grenada will put their shoulder to the wheel.

"Everything points to success of this drive for the weeks Sept. 5, 12, 19 and 26," said Mr. Proby," "and I urge you to be on hand Monday and learn the program, then I am sure you will do your part."

LARGER REWARD OFFERED

Last week we offered a three-years subscription to The Sentinel as a reward to the person furnishing us the first written answer to a question of vital importance to citizens of Grenada County. No one has offered an answer to this question, therefore we are withdrawing the offer.

However, in that we are so anxious to have the question answered, we are making a more attractive offer.

The question is this:

Can anyone tell us why members of the Board of Supervisors have made purchases of grease and oil from a foreign concern (a firm not engaged in business in Grenada County) at 6 to 10 cents per pound and 25 to 50 cents per gallon higher than like products could have been, and can be had from local concerns?

To the person furnishing us the first written answer to the above question bearing his signature (the answer must be correct and must be substantiated with proof) we will give TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS ($25.00) in cash and a three-years subscription to The Sentinel. The money is on deposit in Grenada Bank to the credit of The Grenada Sentinel Reward Fund.

"Members of the Board of Supervisors, not all of them, have bought oil and grease at the above prices. Surely they had a reason for so doing. What was the reason? Gentlemen of the Board who have made purchases of these products at above prices, won't you please tell us why"?

We think our offer a bargain. Money doesn't grow on trees. Picking up $25.00 in this manner, with a three-year's subscription to The Sentinel thrown in, is much easier and more profitable than raising cotton. Who will be the first to supply us the correct answer?

TOO MUCH WHEAT AND COTTON

The United States has on hand a surplus of 100 million bushels of wheat, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has been negotiating with Canada, as well as collaborating with Secretary Hull concerning, "what's to be done about it." The Canadian trade treaty stands in the way of our agricultural plan to subsidize a wheat export program to get rid of the country's towering surplus of wheat. Canada is already carrying out a dumping program in which it guarantees its farmers 80 cents a bushel on the 1938 crop. Secretary Wallace is seeking cooperation with Canada in this matter, in order, he says, to preserve the interests of both countries.

The Department of Agriculture has a terrific problem on hand, and it is moving heaven and earth to sustain the program for an Ever-Normal Granary.

Cotton is also involved in our national difficulties since the market price has dropped below 8.25 cents a pound set in the farm act, which makes cotton loans by the Government mandatory. Presumably wheat and cotton loans will be about 50 per cent of parity.

The Government already has about 7 million bales of loan cotton on its hands.

THE HIGH COST OF BUSINESS

A survey just completed by the American Federation of Investors reveals that 150 industrial corporations in the United States, employing 3,171,250 persons, paid taxes totaling $1,631,000,000 last year—an increase of almost a billion dollars in five years (the 1932 tax burden of the same 150 corporations was $681,648,286).

The 1937 tax payment represented an average of $514 paid for each employee and $291 for every common stockholder. One company, employing more than 5000 workers, paid a tax equalling $4,580 for each of its employees. In other words, that is how much it cost the employer in taxes alone to keep his plant open and provide jobs for his employees.

The alarming increase in business taxation, we believe, is a definite threat to the whole nation, for, if business men are to remain in business, profits must be sufficient to pay not only taxes, but wages to workers and dividends to the investors also.

When taxes equal the income of a businessman, where is he expected to find the money to pay wages to employees?

DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE SOUTH

The statisticians have a way of explaining the financial and economic conditions of the country. Recent charts show that all but one of the Southern States are enjoying business conditions equal to, or better than the national average.

GOVERNMENT STUDIES CRITICIZE MARGARINE TAXES

Within the last couple of weeks two official government studies have taken cognizance of the old campaign, as waged by certain creamery and dairy interests, to impose discriminatory taxes on oleomargarine. These combined studies definitely indicate that the taxes are harmful to the economic structure of the Cotton South, which produces cotton-seed oil and other farm products used in margarine, and that they are of but little benefit to the creamery and dairy industries.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its "The Dairy Situation" release of August 16, spikes once and for all the often asserted contention that every pound of margarine used displaces a pound of butter. It also declares that there would only be a very small increase in the price of butter if sale of margarine were completely eliminated.

"The Dairy Situation" release declares that primarily because of the price differential between butter and margarine, they are not directly competitive, and that the elimination of the sale of margarine would result in but a very small increase in butter consumption. Furthermore, since the United States now consumes all the butter it produces, it is contended that the increase in butter consumption would bring about increased imports and production of butter. These increases in supplies would tend in large part to counteract any temporary price increases caused by the new demands for butter.

Just prior to the release of "The Dairy Situation" study, the National Emergency Council, in submitting its report to the President on "Economic Conditions of the South," called attention to the fact that "The further development of cotton-seed oil for oleomargarine and kindred products has been hampered by taxes, licenses and other restrictive legislation not only by States outside the (southern) region but also by the Federal Government."

The Department of State and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in two other but less recent statements on the margarine tax question also belittled the taxation of margarine as an aid to the dairy industry. The Department of State declared that if margarine were completely eliminated the price of butter at best would increase only very slightly, and Secretary Wallace, in an address before dairy farmers at Syracuse, N. Y., asserted that "no degree of agitation against butter substitutes will turn the tide."

None of those studies has taken into consideration the stake of the consumer in the margarine tax squabble, save that the report of the National Emergency Council noted the stark want of an adequate diet on the part of many consumers in the South. There are millions of others in like want in other parts of the United States. It seems the height of folly for the Federal Government and many states to impose discriminatory taxes on margarine, a low-cost but highly nutritious food product, when it is greatly needed by low-income consumers and its sale does not greatly affect the creamery and dairy industries. Especially when margarine made of products produced on American farms.

$13,500,000,000 OF YOUR MONEY

It is estimated that government—federal, state and national—will levy taxes to the tune of $13,500,000,000 this year.

Just one-ninth of that sum will be raised through income taxes. The gigantic balance will be raised through indirect taxes which represent part of the cost of a pair of shoes, a ticket to a show, rent, groceries and every other necessity and luxury of life.

The great bulk of indirect taxes are paid by persons of small and moderate means. A man with a thousand dollar a year eats as much as a man with fifty thousand. And the hidden tax burden is obviously of infinitely greater importance to him.

Here is the answer to those who think the tax problem is a wealthy man's problem, which doesn't touch the poor. There isn't a man, woman or child in this country who doesn't pay taxes—and heavy taxes, to boot. And the worst sufferer from extravagant government is that ordinary citizen who thinks he is tax-free because he pays no direct levies.

Loans Require Cotton Be Graded And Classed; Service Available Free

If and when Government loans are made on the present cotton crop it will be necessary to have the cotton graded and classed. Farmers in organized one-variety communities may save this expense by taking advantage of the free classing service offered under the Smith-Doxey Act, says E. H. White, state director of extension.

Director White recently appointed J. W. Willis, J. E. Hite, and A. P. Fatherree as a state committee to assist Mississippi farmers in taking advantage of the free classing service.

The classing will be under the direction of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. As the season already is far advanced, Director White believes that in a short time a dead line will be set, after which no other applications for classing will be taken this year. Applications will be acted upon in the order in which they are received. The service is available only to organized groups.

There are about 1,000 one-variety cotton communities in the Cotton Belt that should qualify for the free classing service merely by applying through the county agent for necessary forms to fill out and send to their state committee. There are many other communities in the state that are not organized as one-variety communities, although only one variety of cotton is grown. They may qualify for the services by setting up a reasonable association and planning a program to keep their planting seed pure and protecting lint quality by proper ginning.

The long-time objective of the program, Director White points out, it not merely to save the farmer the cost of classing, but to make the farmer more money for better cotton and help him to obtain the real value of his cotton by doing away with the hog-round system of buying. At the same time the farmers, by keeping their planting seed pure, can maintain a continuous production of an improved quality of cotton.

AAA Soil Practices Needed By Dairymen

State College, Miss., Sept. 1—Six soil-building practices which Mississippi dairy farmers need and for which they can receive pay have been listed by L. A. Higgins, extension dairy specialist. Too many dairy farmers, he says, have the idea that the soil-building practices and the payments the AAA will make for these practices are for the cotton and general farmer and have no connection with dairying.

Mr. Higgins is advising dairymen to take advantage of the opportunity to build a good permanent pasture or to build up the yielding capacity of the land by planting winter legumes. Although there are many practices which the Mississippi farmer may receive payments for putting into operation, Mr. Higgins says he believes that six are the most needed by Mississippi dairymen.

He lists the following practices which are counted as one unit in the soil-building allowance for the farm: (1) A full seeding of permanent pasture mixtures on one-half acre of pasture land; (2) the application of 1500 pounds of ground limestone to one acre of pasture; (3) the application of 500 pounds basic slag or 300 pounds of superphosphate on one acre of pasture; (4) the construction of 200 linear feet of terraces with proper outlets; (5) the use of 10 pounds of good adapted seed in reseeding depleted pastures; and (6) seeding of biennial, perennial or winter legumes on one acre of crop land.

Each of these units will entitle the farmer to payments of $1.50 up to the maximum payment for the farm.

Farm Women Made Impressive Record

State College, Miss., Sept. 1—Mississippi farm women made an impressive record during Rural Better Homes Week when 14,831 families made improvements on their homes, farm buildings and grounds, according to Miss Lorraine Ford, home management specialist of Mississippi State College.

A summary of reports from 54 counties showed that 552 home demonstration clubs participated in the program, 546 meetings were held with an attendance of 28,800 women and girls, and 165 community and county tours were made to study improved homes, landscaped grounds, demonstration gardens, model poultry houses, and other improvements.

The 661 better homes chairmen who cooperated with the county home demonstration agents in the program reported that 1029 new farm homes were built, 4006 dwellings were repaired, 1552 houses were remodeled; 987 homes, 741 farm buildings, and 1040 fences were painted or whitewashed.

Repairs and replacements were made on 1740 roofs, chimneys, 600 flues, 1623 floors, 1269 porches, 2802 steps, 1578 doors, windows, 2162 walls, 819 screens, 862 foundations, and 1188 farm buildings.

New additions include 2190 rooms, 557 porches, 638 bathrooms, 172 laundry rooms, 763 clothes closets, besides built-in equipment in 917 kitchens and 762 play rooms for children.

There were 521 farm families who installed running water systems for the first time, 970 improved their home lighting facilities, 241 added heating units, and 549 provided sewerage facilities.

Families within reach of cheap power purchased 157 washing machines, 166 sewing machines, 155 vacuum cleaners, 175 irons, 25 mangles, 300 stoves, 1088 pieces of cooking equipment, 208 heaters, and 889 radios.

Turning attention to interior improvements, farm women refinished 1928 floors, repaired or refinished 7217 pieces of furniture, made 2478 new pieces of furniture, painted 1470 rooms, papered 1783 rooms, and made children's furniture for 686 rooms.

A total of 16,173 families participated in a clean-up campaign; 747 farmsteads were rearranged, 1622 walks and drives were improved, 2529 lawns were sodded or planted, 11,051 shade trees and 63,546 shrubs were planted, 156 cutting beds were established, 3919 out-door living rooms were built and 901 back-yard play grounds added.

A five-year landscaping demonstration plan was started in 49 communities.

Twelve community houses were built, 25 canning centers and 14 farm women's markets were established, 4612 junk heaps and 2605 truck loads of rubbish were removed; 2978 churches or church grounds, 200 school grounds, and 200 cemeteries were improved.

Home labor and farm materials were utilized to save cash. Expenditures for improvements made during the week totaled $378,962. A total of 4619 families who used only home labor and local materials estimated they saved $63,866.

In highway development, 318 billboards and signs were removed, 144 filling stations attractively planted, and 1739 mail boxes improved.

The organizations and agencies which cooperated in the Better Homes campaign included garden clubs, Sunday school classes, Federated clubs, churches, federal agencies, merchants, newspapers, vocational teachers, and chambers of commerce. Forty-one county papers issued special Better Homes editions, 336 sermons were preached, 266 four-minute talks were given and 13 film strips or pictures shown on phases of home improvement.

Exhibits included posters, window displays, flower shows, vegetable shows, antiques, food, and clothing. County tours, socials, health pageants, and community singings drew high interest and large crowds.

Ten negro home demonstration agents observed Rural Better Homes Week in their counties. Eighty-two rural communities put on good programs and turned in reports. Some of the programs called for a continuation of clean-up, yard improvements, sanitary toilets, and recreation centers.

Choctaw county submitted the best county report in the Better Homes contest. Monroe was second, and Coniah third. Attala won first place in the poster contest, Jasper was second and Pike third.

Weekly News Letter

Beginning this fall, we hope with the cooperation of the college authorities of the State, both in the Senior and Junior college divisions, to carry on a program of education in reference to what the Federal and State Governments are trying to do to aid the needy blind, the needy aged, and the needy children. The better informed our citizenship is on these matters, the better the service rendered will be, for when we all understand the plan, there can be better cooperation in all phases of the program.

Miss. Forest and Park Service News

Serious curtailment among woodworking industries, decreased employment and a progressive depreciation of timber quality threatens growing stock unless drastic cutting restrictions are enforced, a Southern Forest Survey of the growth and drain in the forests of central and southwest Mississippi reveals.

Covering the upland portion of 28 central and southwestern counties lying east of the floor plains of the Mississippi and Yazoo Rivers, the aggregate area is 10,799,500 acres, 56 per cent of which is forest land, 42 per cent crop land and pasture, and the remaining 2 per cent used for miscellaneous purposes.

The comprehensive survey revealed that in 1935, the overcut amounted to nearly 400 million board feet, and during 1936, the inventory was reduced by approximately 580 million board feet.

The report warned that to continue the overcutting practice was to severely cripple forestry work in this area and revealed that this section of the state has a severe unemployment problem to solve. The best possible solution offered would be immediate inauguration of an intensive, organized export to develop the forest resources.

Although serious overcutting prevails, the report pointed out that natural growing conditions are so favorable that it is possible to increase the forest increment so as to bring about a favorable balance of growth over drain and reserve the present downward trend in supply.

Technical tables are shown, depicting the drain on commodities, and the under development to replace the forest products. They also reveal the man hours used in employment which face severe reduction if the stock is to continue depleting. There were 17,795 men employed in 1936, working 10 hour days in the forest industry.

For every 100 tons of fertilizers farmers bought in 1932 they bought 189 tons in 1937. During this same period in the fertilizer industry payrolls increased 117 percent and employment 64 percent.

Trees Ready For Market

Three million slash and longleaf pine, black walnut and black locust seedlings are being produced by the State Forest Service nursery, near Perkinston, for distribution to farmers at the low cost of production.

Farmers wishing to take advantage of AAA benefits are urged to contact their county agent and have him work out a tree planting program, so that this means may be used for a soil building program under the AAA setup.

State Nurseryman Allan revealed that the seed for this year's crop were sown April 1938. In a few weeks they began to germinate under their mulch of straw and burlap, and water was added to the moisture retentive mulch to assure ample moisture conditions. Birds were driven off by the use of a bird patrol ,composed of boys with rifles using "blanks." The mulch also served to keep the birds away and keep the wind and rain from removing the seed from the beds.

After a few weeks the mulch was removed and by careful watering, spraying for disease and insects, and tediously pulling every competing weed from the seed beds, the seedlings are now about 6 to 10 inches high, with a good fibrous root system.

These seedlings will be packed in waterproof bundles of wet moss and shipped by express to farmers and timber owners over the state to supply pulp wood, saw timber, posts, turpentine, fire wood and to control erosion.

Trees which are planted grow fast. Slash pine in eight years and on good sites, will average over 16 feet in height and 4 inches in diameter, while black locust will make poles in 8 to 10 years.

Orders for seedlings, or inquiries about planting sites, etc., should be addressed to the State Forester, Old Merchants Bank Building, Jackson, Miss.

On Mississippi Farms

(By F. J. Hurst)

A good permanent pasture is a basic part of every well-planned farm. Productive pastures furnish the cheapest feed grown for livestock and offer one of the most effective means for controlling erosion.

Nutritious grasses and clovers are rich in valuable proteins, essential minerals, growth-promoting and health-protecting vitamins.

Good pastures are essential to the economical production and maintenance of workstock, beef cattle, hogs, sheep, and poultry. Pastures do not require cultivation and animals harvest the crop themselves.

While clean cultivation hastens erosion, sod forming pasture grasses and clovers prevent erosion and conserve fertility twelve months during the year.

The importance of improving pasture has been shown by both agricultural research and farm experience. At the McNeill experiment station improved pasture required only 1.5 acres per animal unit. Unimproved pasture required 10 acres per animal unit. Improved pasture not only carried more cattle but produced more rapid gains. The animals on improved pasture gained 260 pounds per head, while those on unimproved pasture gained only 160 pounds per head.

Pasture improvement demonstrations conducted by farmers in cooperation with county agents during the past five years have shown remarkable results in increased production.

The most important practices include clearing, terracing of rolling land that needs it, seeding to proper mixtures of grasses and clovers, fertilizing, liming and mowing. Probably no other practices have given such marked results as seeding to adapted grasses and clovers and application of basic slag or superphosphate.

Under the AAA farm program farmers are offered payments for soil-building practices which will cover a substantial part of the cost of establishing new pastures or of improving old pastures. Practices for which farmers can earn payments for improving their pastures are as follows:

Construction of 200 linear feet of standard terrace for which proper outlets are provided, $1.50.

Contour riding on non-crop land—700 linear feet of ridge or terrace, $1.50.

Seeding permanent pasture mixtures containing a full seeding of adapted legumes and grasses, $3 per acre.

Reseeding depleted pastures with good seed of adapted pasture grasses or legumes—10 pounds of seed, $1.50.

Application of 300 pounds of 16 percent superphosphate, or its equivalent on permanent pasture, manent pasture, $1.50.

Application of 200 pounds of 50 percent muriate of potash on permenta pasture, $1.50.

Application of 500 pounds of basic slag or rock phosphate on permanent pasture, $1.50.

Application of 1500 pounds of ground limestone per acre, $1.50.

Farmers interested in building or improving permanent pastures can find valuable information in Extension Bulletin No. 82, "Pasture Production Manuel," available upon request to county agents or to the Mississippi Extension Service. In addition to much other information, this bulletin gives seeding mixtures and rates of seeding fo reach soil type in Mississippi.

GRENADA CITIZENS JOIN

A number of business concerns, as a patriotic gesture, plan to make advance purchases during the four-week activity in order to swell the buying tide to record proportions.

Others, in anticipation of increased business and in view of a heavy fall and winter trade, are planning to employ additional sales people, thus realizing one of the most vital objectives of the drive—the creation of jobs.

In a last minute statement as the four-week September activity begins, Chairman Proby expressed his confidence in the patriotism and civic loyalty of the citizens of Grenada and in anticipation of their united help extended thanks to all.

Citizens are reminded to be on the alert for the rare sales savings to be made available by cooperating dealers week by week throughout the month.

As indicative of the interest already created by the "Buy Now" idea, a number of cooperating merchants report a noticeable pickup in sales and a responsiveness on the part of shoppers to buying suggestions.

In the meanwhile, with true crusade spirit, every cooperating citizen is expected to spread the story of "buying now for better business" by word-of-mouth with neighbors and friends in town and country.

As stated by Chairman Proby, the success of the sales effort is going to depend "upon the everlasting teamwork of every individual citizen."

"With confidence and trust," declared Mr. Proby, "nothing can stop Grenada. The engines of business will continue to turn over and carry this community, this state and the nation into the haven of prosperity, safely and sturdily."

Farm Exhibits Of State Fair Are Announced

Six Counties To Put On Agricultural Exhibits October 10-15

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 1—Six counties will put on agricultural exhibits at the Mississippi Free State Fair to be held at Jackson October 10-15. The six counties are: Sunflower, Noxubee, Newton, Madison, Pearl River and Stone.

F. J. Hurst, agricultural superintendent of State Fair, announced today that the six counties selected to arrange the exhibits would feature cotton production, ginning and marketing; dairying, diversified farming, a live-at-home program, county farm planning and farm enterprises adapted to the coastal sections.

The entire farm section of the exposition, according to Superintendent Hurst, will present a colorful cross-section of the state's agricultural and rural home life at its best. New developments in the field of agriculture and home-making will be portrayed and a wealth of useful information presented fair visitors.

Among various federal and state agencies which will be represented by educational exhibits are the Mississippi Extension Service, Mississippi State College, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Farm Security Administration, State Plant Board and Board of Health.

WPA Shrinkage Expected This Fall

Mississippi WPA headquarters in Jackson today announced that employment on WPA projects in Mississippi has reached a new peak of 42,452 workers, but that a rapid shrinkage is expected to begin immediately, as workers leave the rolls to pick the 1938 cotton crop. About 8,000 needy farm workers have been given temporary WPA employment during the lay-by season. However, WPA plans have taken into account the private employment opportunities for cotton pickers which develop when the crop is ready for harvest. Several hundred workers have already left for the cotton fields in the Southern part of the state, it was said. Meanwhile applications and certifications for WPA are still being handled, so as not to deprive needy families of a chance for assignment after the farm work is finished.
